1. Professor Tirler, deputy chairman of the South Tirolese Socialists, is reported to have told von Guggenberg recently that he considered the situation so hopeless in South Tirol today that he was seriously considering the advisability of the South Tirolese Socialists returning to the Italian Socialist Party and forming a German-speaking faction within it.
2. In Tirler's opinion, the Paris Agreement of 5 September was at best only a compromise, and it was quite clear that the Italians had no intention of executing it. Tirler suggested that the South Tirolese should from the outset have been far more radical in their demands, and that today only "terrorist methods" could save the situation.
